Hiya.
Hope your travels and field time are going smoothly. To better assist you in reviewing the DEQ SC NRRB presentation and preparing your comments for the last 5 minutes, I created a Word doc of all the notes in the slides, which is what we plan to deliver verbally to the board. There are VERY few slides with words on them – mostly pictures and figures, so you should be able to skip trying to download and view the whole thing, but just reading these notes. There should be no surprises and you shouldn't have any major issues with any of this as it is what we have been presenting over the past many months, is in our video and in the SC Summary Report. If there is something significant you really need us to change, we need to know by early afternoon today. Else, you can take your time this evening to prepare your remarks, etc.

See you tomorrow!

Matt-

Unfortunately, I'm not sure I'll have time to provide comments before noon today. I'm having trouble downloading and then printing (laptop keeps freezing). And we have to leave in a few minutes to drive down to Portland....

Hi Eva and Sean,

Below is an FTP link to a final draft for the DEQ NRRB presentation. It mostly consists of photos and figures, with all of our talking points to the board captured in the notes panels. A suggestion is to print the "notes pages" to refer to as you work through the Powerpoint in slide show mode. We also suggest that you look for high points in the presentation to reiterate into EPA's 5 min commentary on the status of source control after our presentation. You probably won't be able to view the view clip in this version.

As you can imagine, we are still refining minor elements of the presentation. If you have any feedback on the presentation, we need it by early tomorrow afternoon. Please provide it via email as Alex is working from home, and I am out of the office after 12:00. Given the scramble to pull this together, we ask that input be limited to significant comments.

See you Wednesday.
